Democracy and Civil Society IJNL Vol 13 Iss 3

Nepal's civil society evolved into a vibrant movement for defending democracy and human rights during the people's movement in 2006, while the political parties were taking a back seat in the King's autocratic regime. The vacuum of democratic movement was filled in by the NGO Federation, human rights organizations, and natural resource management networks, as well as women, indigenous people, and other marginalized groups throughout the country. The mobilization by these federations and
