In Flower Development: Methods and Protocols, researchers in the field detail protocols for experimental approaches that are currently used to study the formation of flowers, from genetic methods and phenotypic analyses, to genome-wide experiments, modeling, and system-wide approaches.

ABC model of flower development Wikipedia

The ABC model of flower development is a scientific model of the process by which flowering plants produce a pattern of gene expression in meristems that leads to the appearance of an organ oriented towards sexual reproduction, a flower.

Flower Development Biology

Pattern formation in plants: how to make a flower. Flower organs form in concentric rings, called whorls, starting with the outer whorl. Sepals form first, followed by petals, and then by stamen, and finally by carpels.

Flower development in rice Journal of Experimental

In rice, the term flowering has several meanings, including inflorescence initiation, development of the flower structure, panicle extrusion (heading), and flower opening (anthesis). In this review, the focus is on development of the floral structure, with a brief examination of inflorescence initiation, heading, and flower opening.

Flower development

Studies of Arabidopsis thaliana, which has typical eudicot flowers, have been fundamental in advancing the structural and molecular understanding of flower development. The main processes and stages of Arabidopsis flower development are summarized to provide a framework in which to interpret the detailed molecular genetic studies of genes assigned functions during flower development and is

Flower Development Open Questions and Future Directions

Abstract. Almost three decades of genetic and molecular analyses have resulted in detailed insights into many of the processes that take place during flower development and in the identification of a large number of key regulatory genes that control these processes.
