Institutional Barriers in the Transition to Market

Examines the institutional developments in 28 transition economies over the past two decades and concludes that, contrary to popular belief, institutions were not neglected; while personalities mattered as much as policies for outcomes, getting the basic institutions right was the most important aspect of a successful transition.

Institutional barriers in the transition to market

Institutional barriers in the transition to market : examining performance and divergence in transition economies. [Christopher Hartwell] -- Conventional wisdom has it that the transition from communism to capitalism faltered because 'institutions were neglected.' Popular thinkers and even Nobel laureates have proclaimed that the emphasis
